DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1, 2, 7, 8, 12 – 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Feddersen (US 2005/0116476) in view of Feddersen et al (US 7,015,595).

Feddersen discloses a control system for a double-fed generator having a rotor and stator and a converter having an inverter (elements V4-V6), grid inverter (elements V3-V1), DC-link (see element C3) and a clamping unit having clamping element (see figure 3, element crowbar). Moreover, a resistor element R15 (see figure 1 & figure 3) is used for clamping a voltage. It is also disclosed that the resistance element can be connected in parallel (paragraph 0008) and that more than one resistor can be used (paragraph 0027) and that the clamping element is used when an over current is detected (paragraph 0019).

Although Ohm's Law discloses that the current is equal to the voltage divided by the resistance ($I = V/R$), thus an over voltage can be determined; however, Feddersen does not disclose explicitly having an over voltage protection/detection device.

On the other hand, Feddersen et al discloses for the purpose of providing a precise control of electrical quantities on the power grid, a generator having a rotor and stator (see figure 1), rotor inverter 151, grid inverter 154, dc-link 152 and an over voltage protector 160 (see figure 1). Moreover, there is a protection device when there is a DC over voltage condition (see figure 2).

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to design a control system as disclosed by Feddersen and to modify the invention by providing an over voltage protection discloses for the purpose of providing a precise control of electrical quantities on the power grid as disclosed by Feddersen et al.

Allowable Subject Matter

3. Claim 6 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
